Sleeping is very difficult in space. Some astronauts like to float in the air, but most of them like to sleep in sleeping bags.

They tie the bags to a wall so that they can't float away in the night. Washing is difficult. There is no shower or bath, so astronauts have to use wet sponge. They brush their teeth normally, but very carefully, they don't want toothpaste to float around the spacecraft. Exercise is very important in space. On earth, your legs carry your body, but in space, astronauts float, so they do not use their legs. This is very bad for their legs, so they must exercise bicycle for this. After a day's work, astronauts relax. They listen to music, read, watch films, play games, write e-mails or talk to their families by radio. Sometimes they just enjoy floating in the air. #### Life in the future

It's so difficult, in fact, to predict how life will exactly be like in the future. However, we can only imagine what may happen in the next few years. Students won't probably go to school because education will be through the internet and computers only. Modern technology will dominate everything in life. In other words, machines, cars and almost all fields of life will be computerized. Scientists will find out medicines for fatal diseases like cancer, but lots of people, on the other hand, will suffer from new serious illnesses.

As for peace, I think that it will prevail the whole world and there won't be wars any more. As a result, all sources of wealth on earth will be devoted to the development and prosperity of all countries. So, food will be so much and free from radiation. People won't die of hunger because there will be no more famines. There will be job opportunities for our youth. Vast desert lands will be reclaimed and cultivated.

Really, I'm optimistic about the future.
